

I'm humbled to be re-elected as Oregon's Attorney General, a job I love and that allows me to use the law to help keep Oregonians safe from both financial exploitation and physical harm. Thank you for the trust and confidence you have placed in me.

Hillary Clinton's words last Wednesday morning ring true: "Let us not lose heart. For there are more seasons to come and there is more work to do." This has never been so important as it is now.

I'm energized and motivated to continue to be the People's Attorney General. That means making sure all Oregonians receive the advocacy and protections of the rule of law, but especially those who are most vulnerable – our families and children; our immigrant communities; our seniors; our LGBTQ friends; our victims and survivors of domestic violence and sexual assault. And, we can't adequately protect our people without also protecting our precious environment. Let's face it: We have our work cut out for us.

Next legislative session, I will be focusing on bills involving transparency and accountability in the public records laws, police profiling, reducing simple drug possession to a misdemeanor, student debt and opioid abuse, among other key priorities. And, as the largest law firm in the state, my office will continue to provide the "gold standard" of legal services to our state government.

I'm so honored to get to continue to serve our state. I cannot do it alone, but with your support our team at the Department of Justice has made great progress during the past four years and will do even better for Oregon in the next four. I will keep you posted on our work; please let me know how I'm doing and make suggestions. I am a good listener and I love hearing from you.

Thank you from the bottom of my heart for your support and encouragement during this campaign. Warm regards for the upcoming holiday season.
